solar system

solar system \sō-lär 'sis-täm'

ASTRONOMY. The sun, the planets, the asteroids and all celestial bodies within the satellites of the planets and comets; generally, the sun and other bodies around it.

One theory of the origin of the solar system states that the sun and other bodies arose from a cloud of whirling gas and dust.

solar time \sō-lär 'tim'

ASTRONOMY. Time based on the position of the apparent sun or a mean sun; see solar day and mean solar time.

SOLAR TIME is based on the time required for the earth to make one rotation on its axis relative to the sun.

solder \säd-ər\ n.

CHEMISTRY and ENGINEERING. A metal of low melting point used to join two pieces of metal together; usually, an alloy of lead and tin.

Acid-core solder is used on steel metal, but rosin-solder is used on copper wire.

solid \säl-əd\ n.

1. PHYSICS. Any substance with a definite shape and a definite volume, that, unlike liquids, does not change its shape. 2. a three-dimensional figure.

Most solids are relatively solid geometry \säl-əd jē-ə-trē\ n. The part of geometry dealing with the properties of lines, surfaces, and solid figures in three-dimensional space.

The study of solid geometry is of particular importance in most branches of engineering.

solid propellant \säl-əd prä-pel-ənt\ n.

ASTRONAUTICS. A rocket propellant in solid form, consisting of one or more chemical compounds and fuel and oxidizer; see liquid propellant.

solar radiation

JUN 12 2016

solar cell \sô'lär' sel
EX. A solar cell is a device that converts solar energy into electrical energy. It consists of a thin layer of silicon or other semiconductor material, which is sensitive to light. When light strikes the cell, it creates an electric field that causes electrons to move, generating a current. This current can be used to power small electronic devices like calculators or mobile phones.

solar plexus \sô'lär plë'üs ANATOMY. The solar plexus is a cluster of nerves located in the upper abdomen, just in front of the aorta. It is involved in the regulation of various bodily functions, including heart rate, blood pressure, and digestion. A blow to the solar plexus can cause temporary unconsciousness.

solar radiation \sô'lär ,räd-ë-'ä-shän
ASTRONOMY. Energy released from the sun. Solar radiation is electromagnetic radiation of all types. The sun also emits other types of radiation, such as corpuscular radiation, which is made up of high-speed particles, mostly electrons and protons.

Gerald Janecek, ZAUM

The copy of Tunshap in the Russian State Library is handwritten in pencil on graph paper. However, the one at Pushkinsky Dom is of mixed hecto and blue and purple carbon copies, all of which are compositions of letters and lines (not true of the Russian State Library copy at all). A copy of Iz vsekh knig [From all books] (1918) in the same series is to be found in the Manuscript Division of the Saltykov-Shchedrin Library, St. Petersburg (fond 1000 op. 2 ed. 682), and it contains the Tunshap poem, the "Min'ka" poem, and another one from Tunshap (chen I men I ben I rap I map I pap), but these are composed with lines and words at angles and are done by hectograph. Such evidence supports my earlier suspicion (Janecek 1984a:109-10) that the contents and design of these booklets and the poems in them differ among copies bearing the same title, thus creating a new level of zaum activity on the book level in which a sdvig of pages produces indefiniteness or indeterminacy in the contents of the given work. Thus, individual poems turn up at random in various books with various means of production and layout. (p.237)

Michael Herr
from Dispatches

I knew one 4th Division Lurp who took his pills by the fistful, downs from the left pocket of his tiger suit and ups from the right, one to cut the trail for him and the other to send him down it. He told me that they cooled things out just right for him, that he could see that old jungle at night like he was looking at it through a starlight scope. "They sure give you the range," he said.

This was his third tour. In 1965 he'd been the only survivor in a platoon of the Cav wiped out going into the Ia Drang Valley. In '66 he'd come back with the Special Forces and one morning after an ambush he'd hidden under the bodies of his team while the VC walked all around them with knives, making sure. They stripped the bodies of their gear, the berets too, and finally went away, laughing. After that, there was nothing left for him in the war except the Lurps.

"I just can't hack it back in the World," he said. He told me that after he'd come back home the last time he would sit in his room all day, and sometimes he'd stick a hunting rifle out the window, leading people and cars as they passed his house until the only feeling he was aware of was all up in the tip of that one finger. "It used to put my folks real uptight," he said. But he put people uptight here too, even here.

"No man, I'm sorry, he's just too crazy for me," one of the men in his team said. "All's you got to do is look in his eyes, that's the whole fucking story right there."

"Yeah, but you better do it quick," someone else said. "I mean, you don't want to let him catch you at it."

But he always seemed to be watching for it, I think he slept with his eyes open, and I was afraid of him anyway. All I ever managed was one quick look in, and that was like looking at the floor of an ocean. He wore a gold earring and a headband torn from a piece of camouflage parachute material, and since nobody was about to tell him to get his hair cut it fell below his shoulders, covering a thick purple scar. Even at division he never went anywhere without at least a .45 and a knife, and he thought I was a freak because I wouldn't carry a weapon.

"Didn't you ever meet a reporter before?" I asked him.

"Tits on a bull," he said. "Nothing personal."

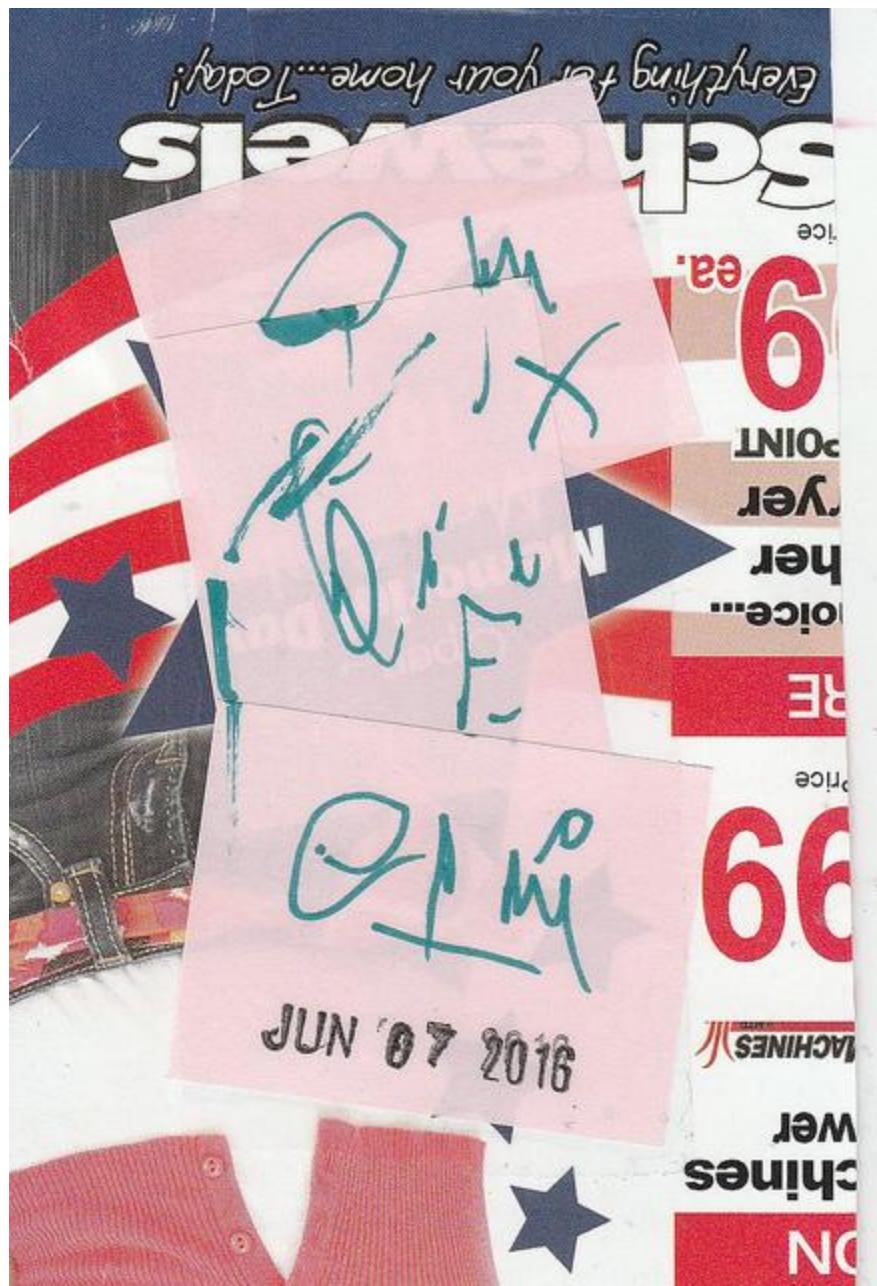

But what a story he told me, as one-pointed and resonant as any war story I ever heard, it took me a year to understand it:

"Patrol went up the mountain. One man came back. He died before he could tell us what happened."

I waited for the rest, but it seemed not to be that kind of story; when I asked him what had happened he just looked like he felt sorry for me, fucked if he'd waste time telling stories to anyone dumb as I was.

to me

Terry McAuliffe emailed you.

Senator Mark Warner emailed you.

Senator Tim Kaine emailed you yesterday.

jim, all of Virginia's top Democrats wouldn't email you if it wasn't so important.

But they know that Ralph is our only hope to keep Virginia moving forward, and he can't win without your support.

Our biggest public fundraising deadline of the year is less than 10 hours away. And as of 2:54pm, we need $1,237 more to hit our goal.

jim, please rush a contribution to Ralph's campaign before it's too late >>

NORTHAM FOR GOVERNOR

This message was sent to: jimleftwich@gmail.com.

As a former Army doctor and practicing pediatric neurologist, Ralph knows that the best way to serve people is to listen to their needs. And that's the same approach he takes when serving the Commonwealth. And now, he wants to continue his hard work as Governor.

Emails are a crucial way to stay in touch with our top supporters. And we want you with us every step of the way.

If you'd like to receive fewer emails, you can click here. If you'd still like to unsubscribe from our emails, click here. If you'd like to contribute to help fund our efforts to elect Ralph, please click here.

From the entire Northam for Governor team, thanks for your support!

to ralph

I know everyone emailed me. You really don't have to email me to tell me you have already emailed me. Has it not occurred to any of you that I might be unemployed and unable to contribute to your campaign? Or maybe none of the people listed in this email have actually emailed me at all, ever. Maybe I am being harassed by the equivalent of a spam-bot. In which case I suppose I should report this email as spam. You guys really should be able to come up with a better strategy for fundraising than this.

Thank you for your email Re: everyone emailed you
